A busy month for crowd hire

by George Kelly

April has been a bustling month for crowds at Envisage Casting Agency, with a diverse range of bookings keeping us busy. From enhancing the ambiance of a music venue to participating in creative PR stunts, our crowds have played a vital role in various projects.

One notable event saw us supplying a crowd for a music venue's photo shoot, where our extras helped increase the numbers and create an energetic atmosphere.

In another instance, our team took part in a high-profile PR stunt in London to raise awareness of a new cryptocurrency, adding authenticity and excitement to the campaign.

We also collaborated with a university, providing actors to act out a disciplinary scene to assist the HR team in their training exercises. Additionally, an events company hired 40 people to wave goodbye at a London exhibition, creating a memorable moment for attendees.

We also lent our expertise to a pre-wedding rehearsal, where our crowd helped increase the number of guests in the shots, making the event feel lively and vibrant.

Overall, it's been a fulfilling month for our crowds, showcasing the versatility and impact of our services in various settings.
